

Minus 20

The Minus 20 page appears in the Leader-Post every Monday. It is devoted to the views of our readers under the age of 20. From music to morals, skateboarding to careers, Saskatchewan young people have strong opinions!

Several former Minus 20 writers are now working journalists while others have found their portfolio of published articles helped them gain a university place or bursary. However, you don't have to be an aspiring reporter or a budding English teacher to join Minus 20, just someone with a lively opinion who will meet their monthly deadline.

We have a group of regular writers who contribute an article each month plus occasional contributions from young readers who see or hear about something in the news and just have to write in to express their opinion.

We welcome new writers and have sometimes featured class projects which students have written about an experience such as visiting the legislature and watching politicians in action during the daily question period.

Articles can be up to 600 words long and contributors must include their age, address and phone number.

For more information contact Minus 20 coordinator Andy Cooper acooper@leaderpost.canwest.com or call him at (306)781-5246.

Thanks!
Andy